

Knowledge to lead

Using Energizers

Guidelines

- Prepare the material needed.
- Plan the length of activity and reserve enough time.
- Outline the expected results of the activity.
- Give clear instructions.

unitar

United Nations Institute for Training and Research

Web Resources

Below you have a list of selected websites where you can find some interesting examples of energizers:

Link	Content
http://www.kstoolkit.org	A very simple energizer to replace the boring round of table of self-introductions at the beginning of an international workshop: Ball around the world.
http://www.corporatedrumming.co.uk	A wide variety of energizers that can enliven, enthuse and focus conference delegates.
http://www.rezaayati.com	A series of games and energizers that can be used in a workshop, helping participants to regain energy and also to create a bonding positive atmosphere.
http://www.trainingmakescents.com	An icebreaker exercise proposed by Christie Stearns in the newsletter "Seriously Fun Training Tips". The related website provides trainers, facilitators, and teachers with various activities to incorporate into their workshops.
http://www.wilderdom.com	Several examples of energizers descriptions and websites.
http://www.unssc.org	UNICEF - Games and Exercises, section I and II have several examples of energizers.

unitar

United Nations Institute for Training and Research